

Marrawah is indisputably Tasmania's (and quite possibly Australia's?) premier wavesailing venue. It offers a wide range of conditions from mellow beginners conditions to full on hard core, experts only. There is a variety of breaks at different angles all within a close radius of one another, so there is always a break at the perfect angle to the wind.

The best known breaks include:

Green Point Beach This is best sailed in a SW to SSW but can be sailed in a W or NE. The SW offers perfect cross shore conditions on port tack for both jumping and wave riding. The SSW offers glorious, long, down the line wave riding on silky smooth faces in cross off wind. The W gives wicked jumping and back side wave riding and the NE gives starboard cross shore conditions if there is swell. All port tack wind directions bring swell! Grassy rigging area, shelter shed and outside shower are added attractions.

Nettley Bay: (5 minutes from Marrawah) More exposed to the Southerly swell so it's generally bigger than Green Point. It is best sailed in a southerly (cross shore, port tack), but can also be sailed in a north or north easterly (cross to cross off, starboard tack).

The Bluff:(25 minutes drive south of Marrawah) This is at a similar angle to Nettley Bay and can be sailed under similar conditions.

Bluff Reef can be sailed in a southerly and is frequently mast high or more.

Lighthouse: (10 mins from Marrawah) Experts only! Lighthouse is the most exposed to the southerly swell and is usually big and heavy. It can be sailed in a North Westerly when all other breaks are on shore.

Sundown Point and Arthur Beach: These beaches offer the best conditions on the rare occasion when the swell is too small at the more Northern breaks! Both breaks are cross to cross off, port tack, in South to South-easterly winds.

Temma Harbor: Tasmania's very own "Jaws"! See Tappo about this one! The conditions for this gem are Northerly wind combined with a 5 to 8m swell!
